'Comfortable Conservation' Days Over Says R. E. McClenny, Jr.

"The days of comfortable conservation are now over" says Appomattox-Campbell soil conservationist Robert E. McClenny, Jr.

In a talk recently to the Concord Garden Club McClenny told the group about pollution problems with slides to illustrate various conditions. "No longer," he says, "can conservationists be concerned only with soil, water, forests, grasslands, wildlife and minerals. Now we must consider air and water pollution in all its forms and from all its sources."

He told the club that the world's population is predicted to increase two million a week by 1980. "We will have to work real hard just to maintain the quality of environment that we now have," he said.

He explained that up until now the United States has been a dollar oriented society. "We also need to be an environmental oriented society," he said. "It's cheaper to pollute than not to pollute the environment." He called for a greater application of the Golden Rule. "Would a factory owner live down wind from his own plant," he asked. Everyone must realize that what is done on the farm affects water quality, quality of food, scenery and open space. The manner in which communities dispose of garbage watse, pollute the air and water affects everyone."

A second speaker at the program was Earl Pickett, of Pamplin, horticulturist and now a part-time staff member of the Soil Conservation Service, Appomattox. He also illustrated his talk with slides.

Murky Skies

Conservationist McClenny, speaking of individual responsibility toward pollution, said "Each small action -- each plane or car exhaust, each factory -- yes, even our own tiny backyard barbecue grill adds its tiny bit toward murky skies. Each small action -- each yard of asphalt or concrete covering the water absorbing earth contributes to flooding problems and less underground water. Each pound of garbage, each car in a feedlot, each mile of highway, each factory, each pound of pesticide and yes, even each rocket shot into space has little effect by itself, but cumulatively, the effect is staggering."

McClenny showed slides of the James River at Lynchburg, terming the James "very polluted." He quoted an estimate of 1600 pounds of garbage or trash created by each person in the U. S, and mentioned that research is underway to develop efficient ways to recycle paper, glass and metals.

He reminded his listeners that erosion of the soil is not a "historic mistake" made "when we were ignorant." Each hard rain, he says, cause soil erosion on farm land, taking away topsoil that it took nature 500 – 1,000 years to make.

Our biggest erosion problems are now urban, he told the group. Mass excavation for subdivisions, industry and other urban development has increased erosion problems.

Farmers are controlling erosin much better than in former years, he said, but the farmer creates an ecology problem when he produces large acreages of crops, a "banquet for pests." In this way, McClenny said, "we throw nature out of balance. Pests can multiply faster than their enemies." He says that in the future we will be using chemicals that dissipate rapidly and have no longer range effect on the environment.

The conservationist ended on an optimistic note. He said, "Our society has much know how and we can do whatever we want to do (to improve our environment.)"

Dr. T.F. Adams To Address Coop

Dr. Theodore F. Adams, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist Church in Richmond and an international religious leader and a past president of the Baptist World Alliance, will be the inspirational speaker at the 33rd annual meeting of the membership of the Southside Electric Cooperative in Crewe on Saturday, September 12th.

The meeting will be held at the cooperative pavilion near the Headquarters in Crewe. Registration starts at 10 a.m. The program gets under way at 1 p.m. and Dr. Adams, who will be introduced by Congressman Watkins M. Abbitt, will speak early in the afternoon. The Arthur Smith television show will furnish the entertainment, beginning at noon and from time to time through the program.

Dr. Adams is known throughout Virginia and the nation as an outstanding Baptist minister; and has been active in religious programs all over the world, speaking just recently in Toyko at an international meeting of Baptist leaders.

Besides reports during the business session, four directors will be elected by the membership. All members of the cooperative in 19 Southside Virginia counties are invited to attend. Usually more than 3,000 are present at these annual meetings and the public is invited to hear the reports and speakers.

"PAYDAY FOR SIN"

ROMANS 6:23

People live today as if there will never be a day in which we face God. "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." . . . Psalms 14:1

Notice first of all the way of Sin. . . "The way of transgressors is hard." (Prov. 13:15). The way of sin is hard because Satan is the master. "Ye are of your father the Devil and the will of your father ye will do.(John 8:44) The Way of sin is hard because it doesn't bring peace. (Isa. 57:21) The way of sin also leaves a man without hope. (Prov. 11:7)

Notice second the wages of sin. "The Soul that sinneth, it shall die". (Ezekiel 18:4) First, sin leaves its mark of suffering. The wrinkles of sin begin to show in time and at last it "biteth like an adder". Next sin leaves its mark of sorrow. Look at the broken homes marred by sin; the homeless children and widows. The sin leaves the mark of separation. (Isa. 59:2) "your inquities have separated be - tween you and your God. (Isa. 59:2) Paul says "The wages of sin is death . . ." (Romans 6: 23) Then . . . "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the Judgement."

Thirdly, notice the way out of sin. (Romans 6:23b) says "your inquities have separated be - tween you and your God. (Isa. 59:2) Paul says "The wages of sin is death . . ." (Romans 6: 23) Then . . . "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the Judgement."

Thirdly, notice the way out of sin. (Romans 6:23b) says "your inquities have separated be - tween you and your God. (Isa. 59:2) Paul says, "without the shedding of blood is no remission of sin." Oh, touch the hem of His garment,
And thou, too, shalt be free!
His saving power this very hour,
Shall give new life to thee.

THE ONLY SACRIFICE

Lesson for August 23, 1970

Background Scripture; Genesis 12 through 23; Romans 4; Hebrews 11:8-12, 17-19.
Devotional Reading: Romans 4:13-25.

Why would Abraham want to sacrifice his own son?

The answer is that he didn't want to, It came to him as a conviction that this is what God wanted him to do. That is pretty difficult for us to understand, isn't it? Why should any man believe that God desired the death of a son for a sacrifice?

If we answer that question from the perspective of a person living in our contemporary world of the twentieth century, the reply would have to be: No justifiable reason whatsoever! Today we would regard such an act as either madness or the depths of criminality.

When In Canaan . . .

Abraham, however, was not a resident of the twentieth century and his civilization was very, very different from our own culture. He lived thousands of years before Christ was born and the religions of his day were crude and barbaric by comparison. Abraham lived in Canaan, a land where the most cruel religions flourished in great variety. Some of them taught that the highest act of devotion to one's god was the sacrifice of a human being cherished by the worshipper. Whereas we would regard this as a grossly immoral act, they regarded it as the fulfillment of their religious obligation. Thus, the Canaanite who offered his first-born son (who was always valued most because he was the father's immediate heir), did not do so out of cruelty or brutality, but with a sense of humble self-sacrifice.

Abraham was aware that his Canaanite neighbors held human sacrifice to be the highest form of religious devotion and very likely he began to question himself as to whether God asked this of him also. He too must have come to look upon the sacrifice of one's first-born son as the supreme act of submission to one's god.

The First-Born

We usually regard the laying-down of one's life for someone else as the highest of all sacrifices. For Abraham, however, this would not have been so – as it may not be true for all of us today. In Abraham's day it was thought that one lived on after death only in one's children, particularly the son or sons through whom the family line was to be perpetuated, The ancient man took comfort in knowing that, even if his own life were taken, his son would carry on the family name and tradition. So the loss of one's son, particularly the first-born son, was often regarded as a greater tragedy than the loss of one's own life. Even today fathers, if faced with a need to choose, would rather lay down their lives than allow their children to perish.

How fortunate when at last Abraham came to realize that the ways of his Canaanite neighbors were not God's ways. "God will provide" he had answered when Isaac asked about the animal that was to be sacrificed. Actually, he learned from our own culture. He lived thousands of years before Christ was born and the religions of his day were crude and barbaric by comparison. Abraham lived in Canaan, a land where the most cruel religions flourished in great variety. Some of them taught that the highest act of devotion to one's god was the sacrifice of a human being cherished by the worshipper. Whereas we would regard this as a grossly immoral act, they regarded it as the fulfillment of their religious obligation. Thus, the Canaanite who offered his first-born son (who was always valued most because he was the father's immediate heir), did not do so out of cruelty or brutality,

God had indeed provided the needed sacrifice and Abraham learned that God does not desire human sacrifice. What a revolutionary idea this was for Abraham's day and age. At this point in history, by the grace of God, mankind took a giant step forward in his understanding of God.

Later, Abraham's descendents would make another great step forward in discovering what God really desires of us: "For thou hast no delight in sacrifice; were I to give a burnt offering, thou wouldst not be pleased, The sacrifice acceptable to God is a broken spirit, a broken and contrite heart . . ." (Psalms 51: 15-17).

Transco Makes Application For Off-shore Lines

Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corporation proposes the first major interstate gas pipeline in Texas' newly developing offshore area.

By application filed August 10 with the Federal Power Commission, Transco expects to spend $27,325,000 for some 88 miles of onshore and offshore lines to take new gas supplies from the Block A-76 Field, Brazos Area South Addition, Getty Oil Company would supply natural gas in consideration for Transco's transporting for it up to 9,300,000 cubic feet per day to be delivered ultimately to its refinery in Delaware City, Delaware.

Transco is negotiating for the purchase of gas from other interests in the field and anticipates the execution of gas contracts with those parties in the near future for a total (including Getty) of 100,000,000 cubic feet per day initially.

Transco will construct, install, and operate about 54 1/2 miles of 30-inch pipeline and 34 miles of 20-inch line both onshore and offshore Texas, a new 880-horsepower field booster station in Matagorda County in the North Markham Field, and necessary connecting and measuring facilities. The line will enter the Gulf of Mexico about 75 miles southwest of Houston.

The proposed facilities will be financed at first through short-term loans and available cash, Permanent financing will be undertaken as part of an overall long-term financing program at a later date.

Construction is expected to begin in the spring of 1971 with service commencing by November 1, 1971.

Social Security

Send your questions to Social Security. Questions and Answers, P. O. Box 2496, Lynchburg, Va., 24501.

Q – How do I know the social security program will be financially sound when I'm ready for retirement in about years?

A – Financially, social security is sound "because it is assured a continuing income in the form of social security contributions from people who are working. The trust funds of the social security program act as a guard against slight variations in this contribution income and the trust funds are in good financial health. With the assurance of continuing income, the social security program has no need to have enough funds on hand at any one time to pay all future benefits. Future income will guarantee future benefits.

Q – I am 17 years old and will be graduated from high school this June. I am receiving survivor benefits from social security now. I am planning to attend the Central Virginia Community College for two years and then go on to the University of Virginia. Will social security help me?

A – Yes. You can continue to receive social security payments until you are 22 provided you attend an accredited school full time and are not married. Let your social security office know that you will be in school beyond the age of 18.

Q – I am still working and intend to continue working after my 65th birthday in December. When should I apply for medicare?

A – In September – three months before the month in which you will be 65.
